INSTRUCTIONS

1. Trace just the menorah and candles onto the plate using NCR or tissue paper tracing method. We don't need the words and flames on yet.
2. Use scissors to cut out the menorah and candles from the paper pattern.
3. Pat a heavy amount of Stonewash onto the back of the menorah using a fan brush. Then place it on the plate using your tracing as a guide. Press firmly to work out any air bubbles. (it's OK that paint oozes out).
4. You are going to apply the candles the same way using your desired shades of blues and purples.
5. Allow the pieces to sit for a couple of minutes, then use your sponge to gently wipe away any large amounts of excess paint.
6. To do the background, use your fan brush and apply Just Blue around the top of the plate. We applied it mainly around the menorah, not going all the way out to the edge.
7. Rinse out the fan brush and while the Just Blue is still wet, use the fan brush to apply Snowflake anywhere you didn't put the Just Blue. Let the colors overlap.
8. Repeat steps 6-7 allowing the colors to overlap and blend.
9. Once the paper has lost its shine, use a straight pin to remove the paper pieces.
10. Trace on the words with your NCR or tissue paper. Use a liner brush to apply one coat of Stonewash to the words.
11. Apply one heavy brush of MangoMadness to make the flames.
12. Finally, use the liner brush to apply the border. To do this we used all the colors except Stonewash and just made small tick marks with one coat.

TIPS

- When paper painting, you need to pat on a lot of paint instead of brushing it on. This helps with the texture and coverage.
- When removing the paper pieces, poke the pin just inside the edge of the paper. Scoop the pin upward to pop the paper off. If you try to lift the edge it will mar up the paint.
- When you're doing the border, don't worry about a pattern, it's way more fun and easy to paint when you're doing random colors. Work one color at a time and make marks that are randomly spaced along the border, then repeat until it's all filled in.
